Title: The Elf

The elven tale of them originating on a different world and arriving on Sosaria through magics is absurd. This kind of statement is a mockery against the Avatar, with this sort of propaganda they try to make themselves seem special it is all lies. The truth of their history has been discovered by sources loyal to the Humanis cause and made available to all:

No one is certain which of the gods created the elves but characteristics of him can be discovered through studying its creation. Being a creature of vanity and self love the god must have shared a strong sense of conceit. By populating Sosaria with elves, the god attempted to show the other races of the time that his work was greatest. However, the frailty and insecurity of the elf had forced it into the woods where they lived among the animals, as only the animals with their limited intellect could be made into their servants. It is from the reptiles in the forest that the elven language was made, the sounds of the snakes was adopted as the elven tongue and remains in use till this day. As time progressed the elves stayed relatively tribal until the time that the virtue religion was created by the humans which among its teaching shared the concept of love and compassion the elves exploited this new openness and infiltrated the cities and orders of the world in an attempt to gather sentient pawns. As all elves are insecure they surrounded themselves with those who would constantly remind them of their beauty.

Throughout the years the elves had contributed nothing and shown no superiority over the humans in any aspect. The deranged elf, Nai who believed he could alter the flow of time, enter astral space and all other nonsense was in fact insane and unable to do as he boasted. Yet another elf who tried to impose his superiority on the humans. Besides this flicker in history the elves had remained relatively ignored by the humans.

It is thus evident that the elves have made very little impact on history but their threat to culture is great. In the modern times the elves have taken land and power from the human race. As their allies in the Regency, Moonglow, Caina and elsewhere keep the powers of the world busy the elves continue their secret schemes to swallow up even more lands.
